WORKSHOP CURRICULUM: This workshop will be conducted in two three-hour sessions divided in the following manner – Beginning, Middle, and End.

The purpose will be to consider basic approaches to the writing of fiction – how one starts a story (Beginning), how one develops the story's conflict (Middle), and how one resolves that conflict (End).

Significant will be the influence of character on story, and the importance of addressing the What If...? question that every writer must consider.

Attendees will be provided, pre-session, with the beginning of an unpublished manuscript which will be used in the class as a guide in the development of their own manuscripts.

Fundamental writing techniques – including outlining, rhythm, character development and self-editing – will be emphasized.
